Modern technologies, threats posed by casualization and de-professionalization, rising anti-intellectual sentiments, and a global pandemic are transforming the status and working conditions of librarians and archivists. How can librarians and archivists resist the erosion of academic values and academic freedom?

Join us at the 2022 CAUT Librarians' and Archivists' Conference to learn how colleagues have successfully organized to defend the profession, uphold academic values, and build solidarity.

Registration

The online registration form and hotel and travel information are available on the CAUT website at: <https://www.caut.ca/event/librarians-and-archivists-conference-0>

The conference will be held in a hybrid format to allow participants to attend in person or online. Due to technical limitations in organizing a hybrid format, some breakout sessions will not be available for online participants. A detailed conference program will be available in the near future.
